A UNIQUE EVENT IN AN EXCEPTIONAL SETTING

For most riders the UCI Road World Championships represent the high point of the international cycling season, and all of them are dreaming of adding their names to the event's roll of honour. Held over the course of a week in the Austrian city of Innsbruck, this year's championships will feature 12 events, from the individual and team time trials to road races in various categories. The races will unfold amid the gorgeous Alpine scenery of the Tyrol region before reaching their conclusion in the stunning city that is its capital. And in their quest for the iconic UCI world champion's rainbow jersey, the riders are sure to receive plenty of support from both the locals and the many visitors attending the championships. More than 600 representatives of the media will be covering this outstanding event, held in a truly spectacular setting. We would like to thank you for your valuable contribution to the visibility and promotion of these championships. As photographers and reporters working for TV, radio, print and digital media, and social media, you will find the equipment and services you would expect of an event of this calibre at the media centre, the TV compound and the many other areas set aside for your use. Please be assured that the teams of the Organising Committee and the Union Cycliste Internationale will draw on all their expertise in meeting your expectations to the best of their abilities. We hope that this media guide will provide you with useful information and contacts as you go about your work in Innsbruck, and wish you an unforgettable 2018 UCI Road World Championships.

WELCOME TO INNSBRUCK-TIROL!

After an intense period of planning and preparation, I am delighted to finally welcome you to the 2018 UCI Road World Championships. Together with my team I will be working hard to ensure that you have an unforgettable stay here in Innsbruck-Tirol and are able to carry out your work in the best possible conditions. Who knows, maybe you will even find time to explore the Tirol region away from the racing action?

Tirol deserves its reputation as a sporting destination. The city has hosted the Winter Olympics twice (1964 and 1976), the Winter Youth Olympic Games once (2012) and each year welcomes some of the world's top sporting events such as the classic Hahnenkamm downhill race in Kitzbühel and the first stop of the FIS Ski World Cup season in Sölden. The region is also often in the sports headlines thanks to international highlights such as the Crankworx mountain bike festival in Innsbruck and other large-scale events. Now we have a unique opportunity to further strengthen Tirol's sporting profile by hosting three world championships in the space of just six months. As well as welcoming the 2018 UCI Road World Championships, Tirol hosted the IFSC Climbing World Championships in early September and will be organising the FIS Nordic World Ski Championships in Seefeld from 19 February to 3 March 2019.

I look forward to writing cycling history together with you and, of course, to reading and watching the many stories about Innsbruck-Tirol which you will produce and share with the world.

I wish you an enjoyable time here with us in Innsbruck-Tirol.

ABOUT THE UCI

Founded in 1900 in Paris, France, the Union Cycliste Internationale (UCI) is world cycling's governing body. Its mission is to develop and oversee cycling in all its forms and for everyone, as a competitive sport, a healthy recreational activity, a means of transport, and as a form of enjoyment. It represents, before sporting and public institutions alike, the interests of 190 National Federations, five Continental Confederations, more than 1,500 professional riders, more than half a million licensed riders, several million cycling enthusiasts, and two billion bicycle users the world over.

The UCI oversees the development of cycling as a competitive sport and in all its forms around the world. It is committed to meeting the highest standards in all its activities and to earning and maintaining its reputation as an international sports federation of great integrity and achieving excellence in performance.

The UCI manages and promotes nine cycling disciplines: Road cycling, Track cycling, Mountain Bike, BMX Racing, BMX Freestyle, Para-cycling, Cyclo-cross, Trials and Indoor cycling. Five of them are on the Olympic Games programme (Road, Track, Mountain Bike, BMX Supercross and BMX Freestyle Park), while two feature at the Paralympic Games (Road and Track) and four at the Youth Olympic Games (Road, Mountain Bike, BMX Supercross and BMX Freestyle Park). Cycling races have been organised at every Olympic Games of the modern era, and cycling is now the third-largest Olympic sport in terms of medals awarded (66) and athlete quotas (528).

The UCI promotes its own events, among them World Championships in all its disciplines. These competitions see the crowning of the UCI World Champions, who have the honour of wearing the prestigious rainbow jersey for a year. The UCI World Championships represent the high point of the season in each discipline and enjoy extensive media coverage around the world.

The UCI also organises the UCI World Cups, a series of competitions that run throughout the season and comprise events of the highest quality in the various disciplines. The UCI World Cup rankings provide a common thread in each season's narrative. The race for the leaders' jersey represents a major challenge, while the title of UCI World Cup champion is a notable sporting achievement.

To promote the global and equitable development of cycling, the UCI founded the UCI World Cycling Centre (WCC) in 2002. As well as serving as the governing body's headquarters, the UCI WCC is a high-level training and education centre that welcomes more than a hundred promising young athletes every year as well as people taking training courses in cycling professions. The UCI WCC's programmes are designed to give everyone, irrespective of where they come from or the resources available to them in their respective countries, the opportunity to fulfil their potential at national or international level. Daniel Teklehaimanot of Eritrea provides an example of what aspiring riders can achieve. A UCI WCC trainee road athlete between 2009 and 2011, he went on to sign his first professional contract and in 2015 became the first black African rider to wear the polka-dot King of the Mountains jersey at the Tour de France. Meanwhile, Venezuela's Stefany Hernandez – a BMX trainee at the UCI WCC between 2012 and 2016 – was crowned a UCI World Champion in 2015 and won a bronze medal at the Olympic Games Rio 2016.

Cycling is also more than just a sport. The bicycle fulfils a number of needs outside the sporting environment, as a means of transport and recreation, which is why the UCI is committed to developing its Cycling for All programmes, which are designed to improve conditions for cycling and its accessibility.

The UCI is responsible for ensuring that cycling operates the most efficient and advanced anti-doping programme, and it works towards this in collaboration with the World Anti-Doping Agency (WADA) and the National Anti-Doping Organisations (NADOs). The UCI is not directly involved in tests and their planning, however. These tasks have been entrusted to an independent body – the Cycling Anti-Doping Foundation (CADF).

UCI ROAD WORLD CHAMPIONSHIPS: THE LEGENDARY RAINBOW JERSEY

Since the first half of the 20th Century, this event has symbolised joy, drama and all the stories, little and big, that illustrate cycling. The UCI Road World Championships take place every year, at the end of the season, and are a major goal for the world's best.

Paradoxically, the legend began amongst the Amateur ranks. During the UCI Congress in Paris in 1920, the Italian delegation, backed by the Belgians, the French and the Swiss, asked for a World Championships for professional riders. However, it was for the Amateurs that the Championships were organised from 1921, in the form of a time trial. According to the UCI, there were not enough professional riders to justify launching such an event for this category of rider. These Championships established nearly 20 years after the Tour de France (1903), well after Paris-Roubaix (1896) and Liège-Bastogne-Liège (1892), were sorely needed for a sport that was rapidly gaining in popularity. They replaced the Amateur middle-distance World Championships, launched in 1893, but interrupted in 1914 due to the First World War and never revived.

The bicycle was all the rage with the public. Created in 1922, the GP Wolber, which took place in France, was considered the non-official World Championships. Then in 1926, at another UCI Congress in Paris, the governing body came up with the idea of an event, raced on a circuit, open to Professionals and Amateurs alike, but with two distinct classifications. That is how the first World Championships for Professionals came into being. The venue was Nürburgring, in Germany, the date July 21, 1927.

In this first edition there were no unknown riders. The big names were present, such as Alfredo Binda, surely the most famous Italian champion after Fausto Coppi. The Lombard, an exceptional climber and winner of the Giro in his first participation in 1925, won by more than seven minutes in front of fellow Italian Costante Girardengo. At nearly 12 minutes, Belgium's Jean Aerts finished fifth overall and was crowned Amateur World Champion.

The Amateur World Championships continued to exist until 1995 – crowning the likes of Eddy Merckx in 1964 and Jan Ullrich in 1993 - when it was replaced by the Men Under-23 World Championships.

As the years went by, the UCI World Championships did not cease to expand, with more races joining the programme. In 1958, for the first time, a race was organised for Women and was won by Luxembourg's Elsy Jacobs.

Between 1962 and 1994, except during Olympic years, a Men's national team time trial was raced, with Italy winning the first edition.

The same event for women was introduced in 1987. Their last editions coincided with the launch of the World Championship individual time trial. The teams event, but for trade teams, was reintroduced to the Worlds programme in 2012.

In 1975, the UCI added what has become a not-to-be-missed event of the cycling season, a road race for Junior Men. The introduction of a race for Junior Women followed in 1987. The Junior time trials became part of the annual festivities in 1994 for the Men and 1995 for the Women.

The UCI Road World Championships were interrupted just once, during the Second World War (1939-1945). Each generation has produced some of history's great cycling names: Binda, Coppi, Bobet, Van Steebergen, Merckx, Hinault... the winners have the honour of wearing the rainbow jersey – white with the five coloured bands representing the five continents – for the following season.

Together with the three Grands Tours, the UCI Road World Championships are among the four most sought-after victories. The unofficial symbolic title "Triple Crown" is used for riders who win three of these four events in the same season.

Only Eddy Merckx (1974) and Stephen Roche (1987) have been capable of this exploit, winning the Giro, the Tour and the World Championships in the same year. The hallmark of the very best.

AUSTRIA'S SUCCESSES AT CYCLING WORLD CHAMPIONSHIPS

Following the introduction of world championships for amateur riders in 1921, the first cycling world championships for professionals were held in 1927. Over the course of the decades Austria has won six medals in the disciplines Individual Time Trial and Road Race.

The best result achieved so far by an Austrian rider in a professional world championships road race is fifth. Two men managed this feat: Harald Maier in 1985 and Tour de France winner Max Bulla in 1931. Paul Popp finished fifth in the amateur world championships road race in Colorado Springs in 1986.

Christiane Soeder was a medal machine in the Individual Time Trial. The rider, who was born in Germany but competed for Austria, took bronze and silver at the World Championships in 2007 and 2008. The first medal for the men was a bronze won by the legendary four-man team of Helmut Wechselberger, Bernhard Rassinger, Mario Traxl and Johann Lienhart in front of a home crowd at the 1987 World Championships in Villach, Austria. The same year Gerrit Glomser won bronze in the U23 Road Race in San Sebastian and René Haselbacher finished fourth.

Austrian riders have also taken a number of strong top-ten finishes. Patrick Konrad finished 10th in the Under 23 Road Race in 2013, while in 2001 Christian Pfannberger took ninth place in the Under 23 category. Alongside Harald Maier's fifth place in the professional world championships, one of the strongest showings by an Austrian was Norbert Huber's eighth place at the amateur world championships. Huber was tragically killed just a few weeks later in a crash during a race.

Further World Championships highlights have been provided by the country's younger riders. In 2015 Felix Gall, a former triathlete, caused a sensation by winning the Men Junior Road Race in Richmond, USA. He managed to break away just a short distance from the finish and hang onto his lead by just a few metres as a French rider closed him down on the run-in to the line. Josef Lontscharitsch was the first junior rider from Austria to win a road race medal, taking bronze at the 1987 World Championships in Bergamo. Marco Haller also won bronze at the 2009 World Championships, while the young Tirolean rider Benjamin Brkic put in a strong performance at the 2013 World Championships to finish tenth.

If there is the wish for live interviews by the RHBs of the countries of the Podium riders, these RHBs can conduct these interviews at the same time as the winner flash interview as well at the flash position.

The relevant RHBs shall address these queries to the UCI floor manager present in the Mixed Zone.

To ensure smooth processes and for the sake of clarity, if a rider has been chosen for an antidoping control and in the case he/she is asking to use the restroom, this process prevails over media activities. The rider will be brought back to media after the test has been completed. Otherwise, antidoping process takes place after the press conference.

THE EVENT & THE RACES

UCI TEAM TIME TRIAL WOMEN

► ÖTZTAL / AREA 47  INNSBRUCK / HOFBURG (54.5 km)

23.09.
SUNDAY

10:10 am – 12:05 pm

The UCI Women's Team Time Trial starts at the AREA 47 outdoor adventure centre by the entrance to the Ötztal Valley. With its wide open roads, the course offers ideal conditions for fast team time trial riding at average speeds of 50 to 60 km/h.

Long course

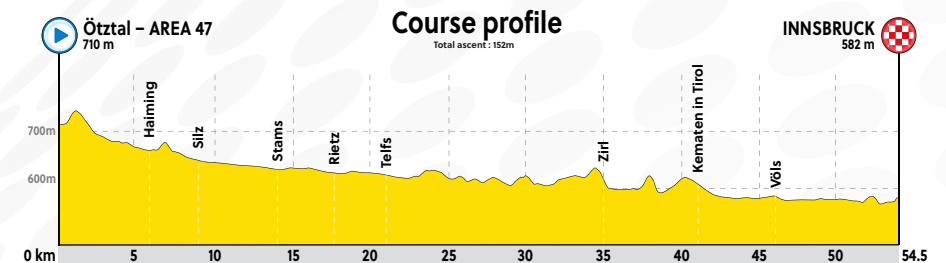

The six-rider teams will make their way along the Upper Inn Valley through Telfs and Völs to Innsbruck. The course may not be particularly technically challenging, but at 54 kilometres from start to finish it is long. The race is likely to be decided on the tight, twisting and slightly uphill section around Kematen and Zirl.

The final run into the finish takes riders past Innsbruck airport, through the Höttinger Au area of the city to St. Nikolaus, where they cross the Kettenbrücke bridge and sprint along the wide Rennweg boulevard to the finish line in front of the Hofburg imperial palace in the city centre.

UCI TEAM TIME TRIAL MEN

23.09.
SUNDAY

2:40 pm – 5:05 pm

The UCI Men's Team Time Trial is one of the highlights of the 2018 UCI Road World Championships. Starting at the AREA 47 outdoor adventure centre by the entrance to the Ötztal Valley, the course takes riders more than 60 km along the Inn Valley to the finish line in Innsbruck.

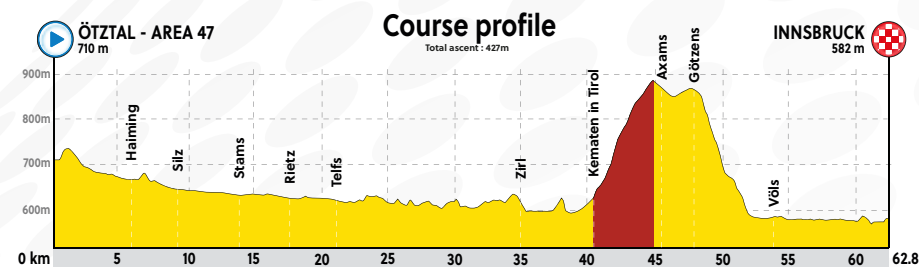

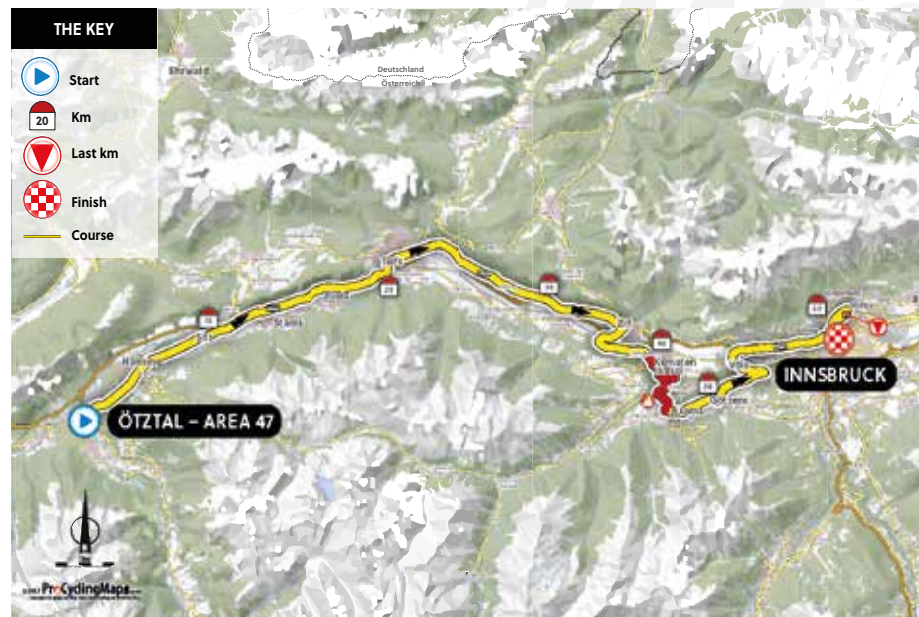

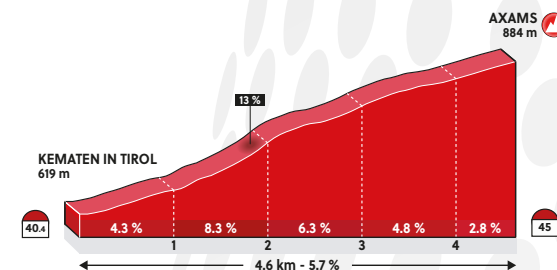

Race-defining climb

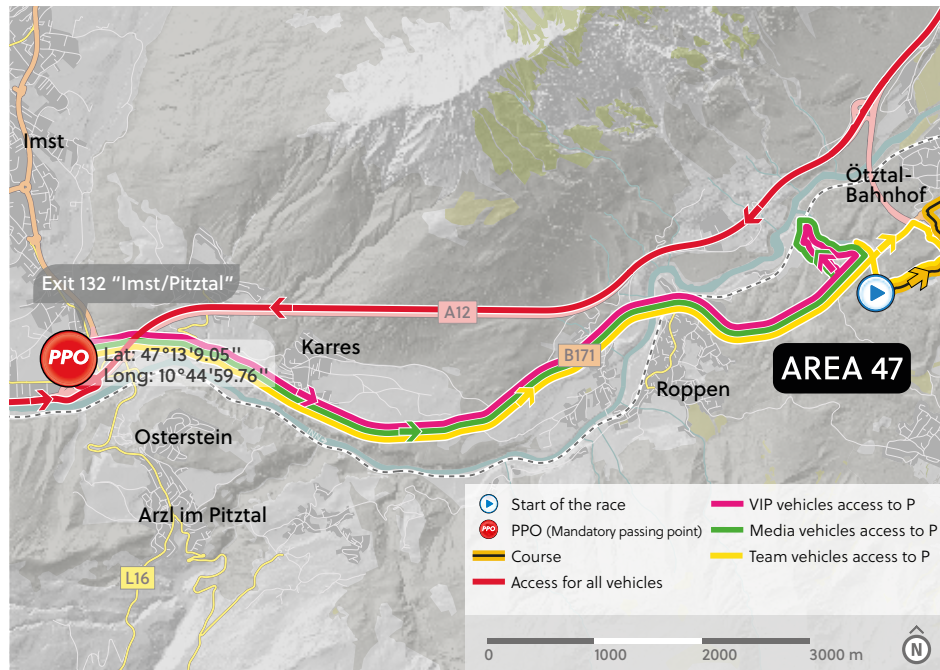

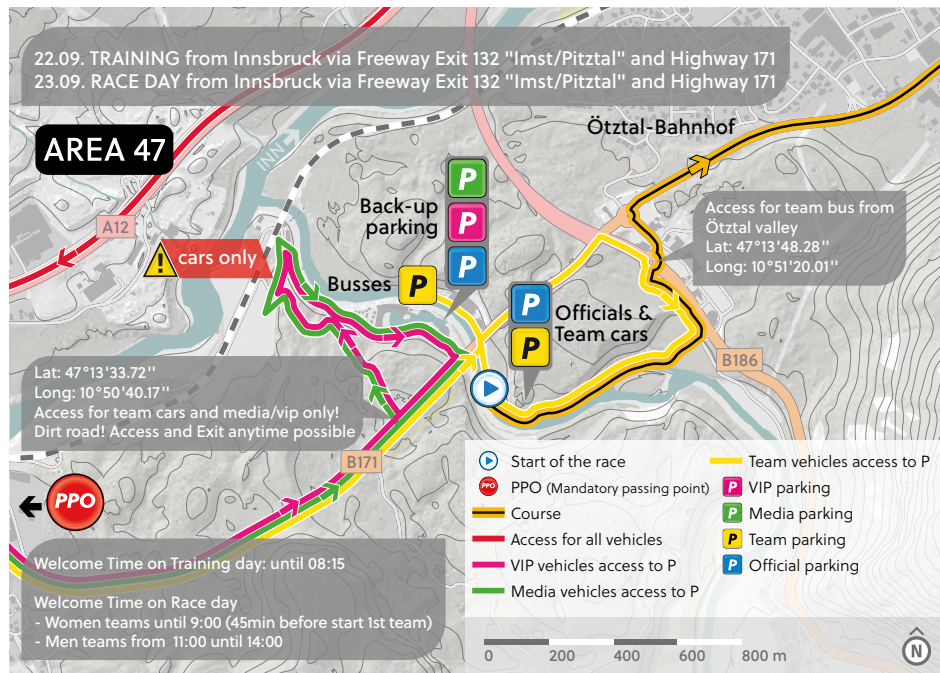

From the start at AREA 47 to the village of Zirl the course is identical to that of the UCI Women's Team Time Trial. At Zirl the men turn off and complete a 4 km climb from Kematen to Axams with a maximum gradient of 13%. With the climb completed, the riders speed along a plateau through the village of Götzens and back down to Völs. The final section leads through Innsbruck to St. Nikolaus and the Kettenbrücke bridge, where the teams then turn and sprint for the finish line in front of the Hofburg imperial palace.

INDIVIDUAL TIME TRIAL

WOMEN JUNIOR

► HALL-WATTENS / SWAROVSKI CRYSTAL WORLDS

❑ INNSBRUCK / HOFBURG (20 km)

24.09.
MONDAY

10:10 am – 11:55 am

The race begins at the Swarovski Crystal Worlds in Wattens, one of the most visited sites in Austria. The course is a classic but very hilly time trial with a total distance of 20 km. The first seven kilometres are flat, followed by a steep climb from Mils to Absam with 100 vertical metres of elevation gain.

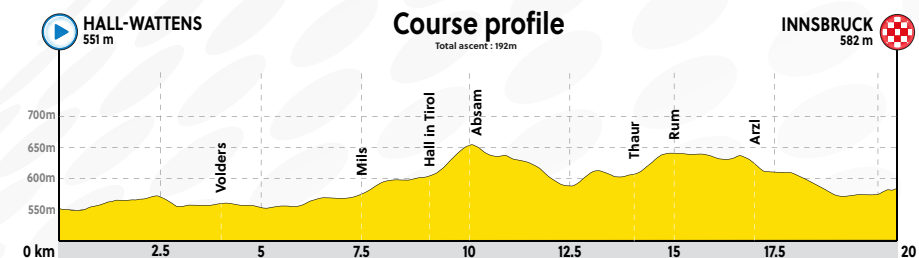

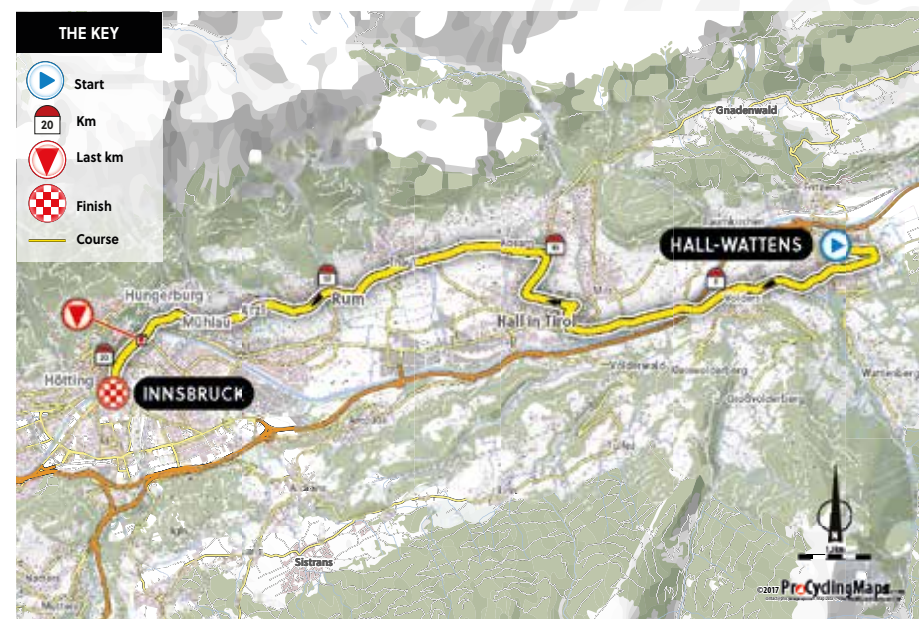

Rolling profile

Thanks to the wide roads the course is not particularly technical, but pacing the effort correctly will be essential. Many sections of the course are characterised by a rolling profile giving riders little time to rest and recover. The final section is a fast run into the finish through several villages to the east of Innsbruck offering great views of the city and its Olympic Village. The race concludes in front of the Hofburg imperial palace in the city centre.

Like the Women Juniors Individual Time Trial, the very challenging time trial course used for the Women Elite, Men Under 23 and Men Juniors categories will start at the Swarovski Crystal Worlds in Wattens. The riders initially head in an easterly direction through the villages of Kolsass and Weer, where they cross the Inn river. Wind conditions will play an important role here.

Challenging gradient

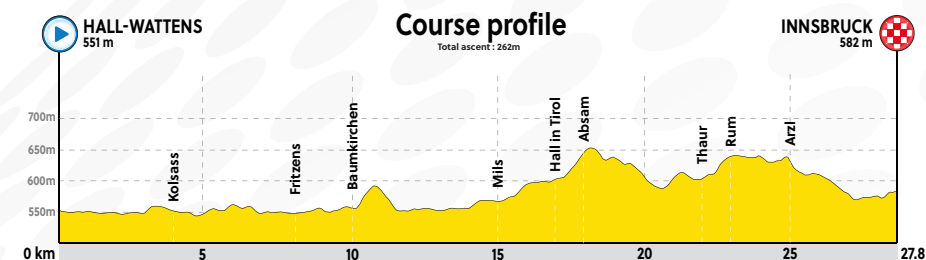

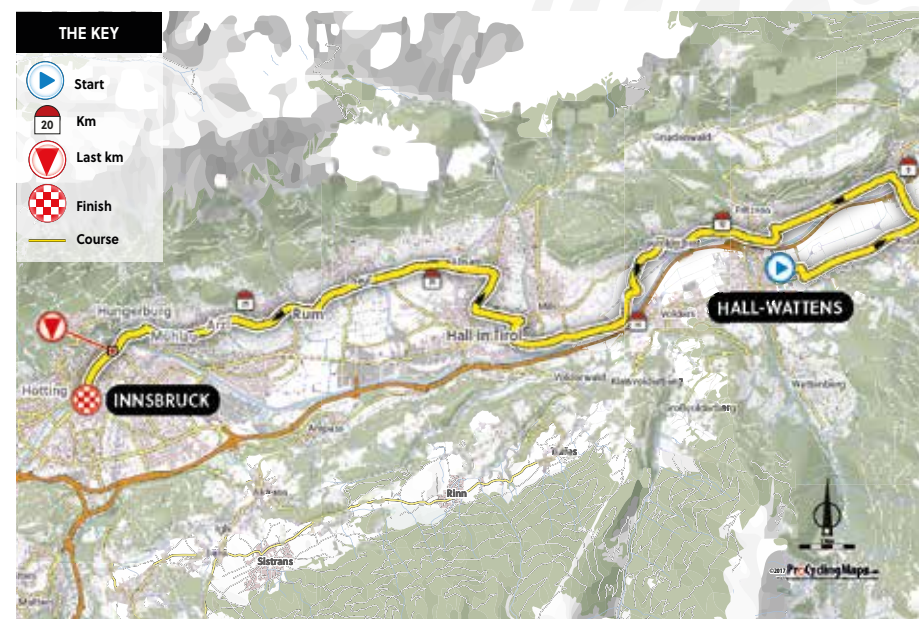

Passing the village of Fritzens, the riders reach the first climb in Baumkirchen. This section of the course will be particularly interesting for spectators. Fans will be at the heart of the action as the riders push themselves to the limit on this challenging ascent.

From the village of Mils the course is identical to that of the Women Juniors Individual Time Trial, meaning riders must also contend with the tough climb from Mils to Absam. The final push to the finish is a rolling section through a series of villages to the east of Innsbruck (Absam, Thaur, Rum, Arzl and Mühlau) before riders reach the regional capital itself, where the race finishes in front of the Hofburg imperial palace.

wald: a 5 km ascent averaging 7.1% and with a maximum gradient of 14% totalling 350 vertical metres of elevation gain from bottom to top.

In Gnadewald the riders pass the second intermediate time split before speeding through the villages of Absam, Thaur, Rum, Arzl and Mühlau down into Innsbruck and the finish line in front of the Hofburg imperial palace.

Tough racing

From the village of Langkampfen the route leads to Mariastein, a popular place of pilgrimage. The following Angerberg climb should not be underestimated and will sap the riders' strength. After crossing the Seen-region area, known for its beautiful lakes, the course continues along a flat section to the town of Schwaz. The first major highlight of the course will be the steep climb to Gnadewald (max. gradient 14%).

From there it is a fast run down from Ab-sam into Innsbruck, where riders complete one or several laps of the road race circuit depending on the category. Even before reaching the regional capital they will already have 90 kilometres of tough racing in their legs from Kufstein to Innsbruck.
